

SHORT BIO

Mario Gonzalez received his PhD degree in Mechanical and Materials Engineering from École Centrale Paris in France in 2001. He then joined imec, where he is currently Scientific Director and R&D Manager, responsible for the mechanical and thermal modeling and characterization group. His current research interests include failure analysis, materials characterization, thermal management, and the thermomechanical integrity of devices, advanced interconnections, and packaging.